I use my xm radio to inform me of weather conditions as I travel while outside the area of local broadcasts. I find it invaluable and to take away something which could help prepare me for possible safety hazards is assine. I am against corporate giants taking over and replacing smaller competitors with a vengeance. I don't feel this to be the situation. I do suspect it will wipe out some competition and will watch that process very, very closely (WALMART). At this junction, however, I don't see that being the case.

Washington should concentrate on the ability of ALL Americans to have at least a choice. That is their job and should place that before looking for financing for their next yacht.
